

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A device may include an integrated circuit chip and channels to carry a coolant. The channels may be proximate to an upper surface of the integrated circuit chip, and the channels may extend along a length of the integrated circuit chip. A density of the channels may change across the length of the integrated circuit chip.